Vienna, February 3.

SOME Days ago a Quarrel happened here between Count Windiſgratz, Preſident of the Aulick Council, and Count Schonborn, Vice Chancellor of the Empire. Their Difference aroſe upon a Diſpute between them about the Right of admitting or ſwearing in a new Aulick Counſellor, which happens to be Count Windiſgratz's Brother. The Vice-Chancellor ſaid ſomething upon that Occaſion, which the other took ill, and deſired him to explain; and he refuſing to do it, they met in the Street, got out of their Coaches and drew, but were ſoon parted, and the Difference made up without any Hurt done. However, the Emperour has thought fit to order them both to retire to their Country-Houſes, till further Order. Count Trautmanſdorff is arrived here from Gratz, and Count Herberſtein from Segedin. A good Number of Horſes have been bought, and ſent to Hungary, for the Service of the Cavalry. Several Thouſand Cuiraſſiers, are raiſing in Stiria and Upper Auſtria. The Emperour has made Count Zinzendorff Governour of Sileſia; but that Count having Part of his Eſtate in Moravia, and Count Wildſcheck who commands in Moravia having no Eſtate but in Sileſia, they have changed their Governments, with the Approbation of his Imperial Majeſty. Conferences about the Military Operations to be undertaken the enſuing Campaign, are frequently held at Court. Prince Eugene propoſes to go to review the Troops the Beginning of April.

Berlin, Feb. 6. On the 3d Inſtant the King went to Wuſterhauſen, but is expected back in two or three Days. Letters from Hambourg ſay, ſome of the Muſcovite Regiments in Mecklenbourg had Orders to be ready for a March, but hitherto they remain quiet in their Quarters. The Advices from Poland have been ſo uncertain and contradictory of late, that nothing was to be relied on; but it is at laſt certain, that theſe troubleſome Negociations are finiſhed; Felt-Marſhal Fleming having given Notice, that the Ratifications of the Treaty were exchanged on the 30th paſt; that the Dyet was to be held on the 1ſt Inſtant, and that it was to be ended the ſame Day. Letters of the 2d Inſtant from Great Poland ſay, General Baudits, with the Saxon Troops under his Command, was to break up the ſame Day; and Lieutenant General Milkaw, with his Diviſion on the 7th, in order to join themſelves in the Neighbourhood of Meſeritz, and return together into Saxony.

Berlin, Feb. 9. The King continues ſtill at Wuſterhauſen. The Muſcovite Miniſter has demanded free Paſſage through the King's Territories for 12 Batallions of Foot from Mecklenbourg, ſome Troops of Dragoons, the Commiſſaries of War, and the Chancery; 'tis aſſured the reſt of thoſe Forces will follow very ſoon, and that the laſt Diviſion under General Weyde, with the Gallies, will likewiſe return to their own Country, as ſoon as the Seaſon will permit. M. Voſſius, the Imperial Reſident, has again made very earneſt Remonſtrances, by the Emperour's Orders of the 26th of January, againſt the Proceedings of the Muſcovites in the Empire, and particularly of their Frigates, which pretend to ſtop and viſit all Ships in the Haven of Lubeck. Letters from Warſaw of the 2d Inſtant confirm the Exchange of the Ratifications on the 30th paſt. On the 31ſt in the Afternoon the Marſhals of the Confederacy made their publick Entry there in very great State, with about 500 Followers; M. Leduchowski took his Quarters in the Cloiſter of St. Bernard, and received the ſame Evening ſeveral Viſits from the chief Perſons of Diſtinction. On the 1ſt Inſtant, about eight in the Morning, he repaired in Ceremony to the Palace, and ſome time after was introduced into the Audience-Chamber, where he found the King ſitting on his Throne, accompanied by the Senators. The Points of the late Treaty, reduced into the Form of a Conſtitution, were then read, which, with other Ceremonies, took up near four Hours and a half, and at the End the Chief of the Confederates had the Honour to kiſs the King's Hand. Te Deum was afterwards ſung in the great Church, at which moſt of the Senators aſſiſted, and the great Guns were fired, with other Demonſtrations of Joy. On the 2d M. Leduchowski had another Audience of the King.

Bruſſels, Feb. 11. The firſt three Days of this Week have been ſpent at the Marqueſs de Prié's in Entertainments, Balls, and other Diverſions, as well on the Occaſion of his Son's Marriage, as on the Concluſion of the Carnaval: During which Time the Marqueſs has not given any Audience, neither has the Council of State been aſſembled this or the laſt Week; not for want of Buſineſs, but rather becauſe the Members of that Council begin to differ in their Sentiments, which 'tis ſaid gives the Adminiſtrator ſome Uneaſineſs: But others, who pretend to be better informed, imagine that Miniſter lays hold on this Pretext to ſuſpend the Diſpatch of Buſineſs, till the Difference between the Spaniſh and German Councils at Vienna, concerning the Government of theſe Provinces, be determined. 'Tis thought the Biſhops and Abbots of theſe Provinces, who continue to aſſemble daily, will next Week come to a Reſolution, upon the Supply to be granted to the Emperour towards carrying on the War againſt the Turks.
